

Research Meeting

April 24, 2013

Tim reported on his recent work, which includes revising the water purification intervention report and researching a potential co-funding opportunity.

There are about 50 charities on the list of global health and development charities that might qualify for a GiveWell top rating; he has emailed about 12 of these.

Alexander gave an update on his recent work, which includes writing a blog post on our progress with meta-research as well as continuing work on a shallow investigation of the impacts of climate change. A researcher who works at a foundation that focuses on climate change recently provided feedback on this shallow investigation, which prompted two major revisions: adjusted estimates of likely sea level rise and an added discussion of the potential impacts of water stress.

Staff discussed the above topics as well as changes to recruiting strategy and developments with other co-funding projects.
